LOOK OVER ALL THE CANDIDATES CAREFULLY

The average American voter for many years has been showing an indifferent attitude as to the character and ability of the candidates he voted for with the result that often times undesirable men have gained important public office and tried and true public servants have been relegated to the scrap pile.

This spring an important primary will be held and every voter should carefully look over every candidate running for office and make sure for whom he votes. Those officials now in office and who have rendered faithful service should be retained in office. Do not let the hysteria of the moment and cry "We need a change" run away with your better judgment. It must take more than a mere desire for a change to warrant the discarding of experienced and faithful men. The voter should remember that it takes years of experience to conduct many of our public offices efficiently and that it will greatly impair the efficiency of these offices to put new men in who are inexperienced and will have to spend a long time in bringing back the record of efficiency now enjoyed by these offices and which means much for the interests of the public at large.

Just think these matters over real carefully and let your conscience be your guide.

Frankfort Has Post Office Muddle

Frankfort has a post office muddle. Monday Robert Stephen, who has served as postmaster of Frankfort for 20 years received a notice that a change of postmasters was to go in effect immediately.

Mrs. Amelia K. Fink the new appointee promptly executed the bond and other necessary papers and prepared to take the post office over on Feb. 14, but Mr. Stephen insisted he would remain as postmaster to Feb. 15 thereby completing the first half or 15 days of the month. Mrs. Fink however declared 14 days constituted half of February's 28 days and that she was entitled to take the post office over Feb. 14. Mr. Stephen is awaiting orders from Washington.

Mrs. Fink has no post office fixtures and needed equipment. She made Mr. Stephen an offer for his fixtures and equipment, but Mr. Stephen considered the offer too low so refused to sell. Before Mrs. Fink can take over the postoffice she must first secure post office equipment.

Mrs. Fink has intimated she may move the post office from its present location into the Sippel Sisters store building.

Tear Gas Routs Bank Bandit Gang

Ross Beatty of Oak Lawn, well known member of the I. N. R. Beatty Lumber Co., figured in a sensational holdup up of the Oak Lawn bank Wednesday morning.

Six bandits had seized Arthur Eichler Oak Lawn policeman and while three men waited in front of the bank, three other bandits armed with revolvers and a shot gun forced the lone policeman in ahead of them as a shield and upon entering the bank yelled "This is a stickup. Hold up your hands".

The cashier of the bank, John L. Brummerstadt, did not obey the command but instead turned on the tear gas valves in the cashier's cage and the bandits beat a hasty retreat with out getting a penny.

Present in the bank were John F. Schultze, president; Bunnerstedt, his assistant; Richard Trienzberg and one customer, Ross Beatty of the Beatty Lumber Co. Brummerstadt, seeing the policeman at the door with his hands in the air, dropped to the floor before the bandits entered and turned on the tear gas.

The Illinois Agricultural association, whose 57,000 farmer members are claimed to constitute the largest state farm organization in the nation, has committed itself to the seeking of new foreign and domestic outlets for farm products as the way to bring back prosperity to agriculture and the nation. As to the means of permanently solving the problems created by existing over supplies of farm goods the association set up a three-point objective: 1. New industrial uses for farm commodities. 2. "Gold Capital of World" Comes Back to Life

THE historic mining town of Barkerville, B. C., is once again coming into its own. In the "boom" days of the 1890s, when the placer gold rush to the Cariboo area was at its height, it was known as the gold capital of the world, with a population once numbering as high as 15,000. Now it is coming back to life again as the latest rush for lode gold in the area is under way, and prospectors are crowding into the town that in late years has been nothing more than a ghost town with a population of a few hundred. The photograph shows the main street.

CHILDREN'S STORY

JUMPING FOR LIFE

WHAT a person can do well he almost always enjoys doing. Nimbleheels, own cousin to Danny Meadow Mouse, is the very best jumper on the Green Meadows, so it is quite natural that he should enjoy jumping. He jumped and he jumped and he jumped for Peter Rabbit's benefit. Peter stole out from the dear old Brier Patch and sat up in the moonlight that he might watch Nimbleheels better. Such jumping Peter had never seen before, and both he and Nimbleheels became so interested that they quite forgot that it is never safe to play on the Green Meadows unless a sharp watch is kept for danger.

Suddenly a shadow swept over Peter. There wasn't a sound. Keen as are Peter's long ears he heard nothing. Luckily for him he was sitting absolutely still at the time. Had he moved the least tiny bit the end of Peter would have been right then and there, for that shadow was Hooty the Owl.

Nimbleheels was so intent on his jumping that he didn't see that shadow.

ow at all until he shot up into the air above the tops of the grasses almost under Hooty. It is a question which was the most surprised, Nimbleheels or Hooty. Swiftly, but without a sound, Hooty turned in the air and Nimbleheels had no more than disappeared in the grass than Hooty was hovering right over it, his great eyes piercing down fiercely for a glimpse of the little mouse he knew must be hiding among the grass stems right beneath him.

Peter sat quite still with horror, which was, perhaps, just as well for Peter. Could it be that the little friend with whom he had become so well acquainted was going to be snatched away in the cruel claws of Hooty?

right before his very eyes? Could it be?

Suddenly Hooty screamed and at the sound out from the grass shot Nimbleheels in the longest jump Peter had yet seen him make. Hooty struck with his great curved claws, but he was too slow. As before, hardly had Nimbleheels landed in the grass than Hooty was hovering right over the very spot. Nimbleheels did not wait for him to scream but was in the air in another long jump almost as soon as he reached the ground. This time he jumped to the side instead of in the direction he had jumped before. Probably it was this that saved his life. Hooty was not ready for him in that direction and so he missed him again.

Then began the most exciting game Peter had ever seen. At least it seemed like a game. It wasn't of course, because both Nimbleheels and Hooty were very much in earnest, the pretty little cousin of Danny Meadow Mouse to save his life, and Hooty to get a good dinner.

Such jumping! It made Peter Rabbit ashamed to think that he ever had bragged about his own jumping. This way, that way, the other way, darted Nimbleheels over the tops of the grasses, and wheeling and turning on noiseless wings Hooty the Owl followed, always just a wee second too late, as he struck savagely with his great cruel-looking claws.

Peter wanted to shout to Nimbleheels and tell him to make for the dear old Brier Patch, but even if he could have he wouldn't have dared, for he knew only too well that Hooty wouldn't think twice of a little jumping mouse if he had a chance for a Rabbit dinner. So there was nothing for Peter to do but to sit there and hope and hope with all his might that Nimbleheels would escape, and that Hooty would get far enough away to give him, Peter, a chance to bolt for the safety of his home.

It seemed to Peter that Nimbleheels was making shorter jumps. Was he getting too tired to jump? If so, the end would come soon. Peter held his breath.

HOW TO USE CODFISH

WHEN one can think of nothing else for luncheon or dinner a box of firm white salted codfish is the answer. The chowder is the dish par excellence. Here it goes again, for there are always a few who haven't tried it:

Codfish Chowder.
Soak a half pound of codfish in water for a few minutes, then simmer for ten. Drain and flake into good-sized pieces—say a mouthful size. Put to cook a cup of finely cut salt pork cut into fourth-inch cubes; when the pork cubes are well browned add three onions sliced, stir and cook for a few minutes in the hot fat, then add one-half dozen medium-sized potatoes cut into small slices, cover with boiling water—a quart will be plenty. Cook until the vegetables are well-cooked, then add the codfish and one quart of fresh milk; bring to the boiling point, add more seasoning if needed and serve piping hot with a milk cracker or two softened in boiling water for each bowl of the chowder.

Codfish Creole.
Cook one green pepper and one onion, both minced in two tablespoons of bacon or three tablespoons of butter, add one tablespoon of pimiento chopped, one-fourth teaspoon of pepper, three-fourths cup of clam broth, one cup of hot milk and one-eighth teaspoon of soda. Add two cups of flaked codfish and cook until well heated through. Serve hot with a border of seasoned hot rice.

Dutch Cod.
Take two tablespoons of diced bacon, cook five minutes, add one-fourth cup of hot water, one-eighth teaspoon

Coldest City

Where the rivers freeze to the bottom and small trees snap off from the biting force of the cold, stands the coldest inhabited city in the world—Verkhoyansk, in northeastern Siberia. It is a place of some size, stands 150 feet above sea level, and in winter boasts of a temperature 85 degrees below zero. Its mean annual temperature is 13 degrees above zero, and it is the center from which the industrious Yukuts, the fur-trading Jews of Siberia, carry on their operations.

Highest of Air Radio Stations

AT AN altitude of 7,200 feet, at Summit, Calif., where the Lincoln highway crosses the Sierra Nevada mountains, is the highest man-operated air radio station in the West. Here six men are on 24-hour duty sending out signals and weather reports to the trans-continental air liners on what is one of the most treacherous stretches of the airway system. On account of heavy winds the building is held down with steel cables.

Sees Great Reduction in Infant Mortality

Half of the babies born in the future will live to be at least seventy-five years old, Dr. Louis I. Dublin, life insurance statistician, recently predicted. This means adding ten full years to the present life expectation. Part of this will be accomplished by further reduction of infant mortality.

"But more important is the real possibility of reducing the unnecessarily high mortality of persons in the middle ranges of life," Doctor Dublin said. "The present mortality of persons between fifty and sixty-five years of age can be reduced by at least 30 per cent through the application of known principles to personal hygiene. There is every reason to believe that this will be accomplished in the course of the next generation during which time emphasis will be placed more and more on what the individual can do for himself in leading a hygienic life."

The WEDDING MARCH MURDER

by MONTE BARRETT

Copyright, 1933, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.
WNU Service.

SYNOPSIS

Waiting in the minister's study, Jim Franklin, about to be married to Doris Carmody, is stabbed to death. Peter Cardigan, novelist, and amateur detective of some note, with Sergeant Kilday, begin the official investigation. Franklin, while waiting, had visitors, among them his mistress, "Choo Choo" Train; his intended wife's father, Ambrose Carmody; her brother, Rylie; Daniel Bullis, politician, and a woman in a blue frock, who had quarreled openly with Franklin. Rylie Carmody admits trying to stop the wedding, after being informed by Webster Spears that Franklin was still friendly with "Choo Choo," despite his approaching marriage. Kilday secures the dead man's keys. Callis Shipley, one of the bridesmaids, is contradictory in her answers to questions, but the investigators learn nothing of importance. An interview with Bullis is also less. Webster Spears admits informing Rylie Carmody of Franklin's relations with "Choo Choo," for Doris Carmody's sake, in the hope of preventing the wedding. Fletcher, Franklin's manservant, is reticent. An interview with Milo Dunbar, Franklin's law partner, reveals nothing of importance.

"Jim wasn't much of a hand to keep such things," said Dunbar. "But we'll see."

It turned out that the attorney was right. Nowhere in his office were they able to find papers of a personal nature that even hinted at helpfulness. His business correspondence was all filed, with scrupulous neatness, in cabinets in the anteroom adjoining his office. The private office contained only a desk, several chairs, a telephone stand and an elaborately carved cellaret, convenient to the desk.

A careful search of the desk yielded nothing. Peter turned his attention to the cellaret. It was not locked, but beyond an elaborate array of liquors and necessary tumblers, revealing Franklin's tastes in intoxicants, it was devoid of clues.

It looked like a stalemate. "Where else could he file papers of a personal nature here?" the sergeant asked vexedly.

"I'm afraid we've looked about everywhere," Dunbar glanced searchingly about the room.

"How about the safe?" suggested the novelist. "Could it be there?"

"We only file papers of rather unusual importance in the safe," Dunbar demurred. "I don't think it likely that we'd find what you are looking for, there."

"But didn't he have a private compartment, anywhere in the safe?" Peter was reluctant to admit defeat.

"Yes," said the lawyer. "We each had a compartment in the safe for our own use. He had a key for his, and I had one for mine. Wait and I'll show you."

Dunbar searched through the middle drawer of his partner's desk. "I thought I saw Jim's keys here," he began doubtfully. "Then he found it. 'Ah! This looks like it.'"

Kilday and Cardigan followed him into the corridor, which separated the partners' offices, to a large wall safe. The attorney twisted the combination knob, and presently the heavy door swung back slowly. He indicated a smaller door to the novelist.

"That's Jim's compartment. Here, you open it." He pressed the key into Kilday's hand.

The sergeant was elated. For in a subsection of the compartment, he found evidence that Franklin had used this as his personal file. There were letters there, signed "Choo Choo" in a round immature scrawl. But there was no hint here of any other woman, nothing that would help in the identification of Franklin's mysterious visitor in the study that afternoon. Both Peter and the detective were disappointed.

"I'm sorry," declared Dunbar. "I hoped that I might be of some help."

"It isn't your fault you weren't," declared the sergeant ruefully. "Franklin was just too methodical. We found the right place, but he had destroyed the evidence, before we got there."

They were successful, however, in identifying three more of the keys here. With the two identified by Fletcher, this made five—one to the apartment building—one for the apartment itself—a third to the outer office of Dunbar and Franklin—a fourth to the slain man's private office. One of the smaller keys was found to fit his desk, which had, however, been unlocked.

For a moment, Kilday thought he had identified the other small key. It was very similar to the one found in the desk, which opened Franklin's private compartment in the safe. It seemed to fit, when inserted in the lock, but it failed to turn the bolt.

"That would have been too much luck, I guess," the detective grumbled, pocketing the keys.

Only two of the seven now remained to be identified, however, one large, like a door key, in addition to the one he had just failed to identify.

Peter suggested a call on Choo Choo Train after they left Dunbar; but it was late, and a telephone call to her apartment elicited no response.

"That'll have to wait till morning, I guess," Kilday complained. "There are lots of times on this job when I wish I was twins, so I could get around faster. If you aren't tired, though, drop by the office. Something new may have turned up. And," he added, "I'm going to have those license plates checked tonight, to find out who was calling on Webster Spears."

On their way, they reviewed the evidence as it had developed thus far. Of the eight people who had seen Jim Franklin at the church, at or near the time of his death, most could be proved to have had a motive for the crime; Ambrose Carmody to prevent his marriage to his daughter, after discovering Franklin's relationship with Choo Choo Train; Rylie Carmody for the same reason; Choo Choo Train because of jealousy; Daniel Bullis because of the investigation Franklin had been conducting into the political scandal and which was proving menacing to him. The motive for the woman in blue seemed to have been jealousy, but all efforts to identify her so far had met with failure. There seemed to be no motive, as far as Nick Royce was concerned, but the investigation had brought out the fact that Royce was aware of the situation existing between Bullis and Franklin. Fletcher had revealed that. Nor was it logical to believe that Doctor Abernathy could have had a motive for the murder. At most, he might have refused to identify Callis Shipley as the woman in the blue dress. Neither of the men was able to identify this girl's place in the drama which had resulted in Franklin's murder. Admittedly, she had been there twice? She had worn blue. Was she the woman in blue whom the rector had seen? She had apparently known of the murder at a time when it seemed impossible to have possessed this information without having had some guilty knowledge of the crime. She had admitted lying to them, when they first questioned her. In view of this admission, how much of her later testimony could they believe?

In addition, they had questioned Fletcher, who seemed reluctant to talk concerning his master's affairs; Milo Dunbar, the slain man's partner, and Webster Spears. The latter, also, might be shown to have had a motive for the crime if he still loved Doris Carmody. Certainly he had attempted to halt the wedding. Of course, he denied having been the author of the anonymous telephone call informing Ambrose Carmody concerning Choo Choo Train. Yet neither of the men was sure he had told the truth. He denied, too, the story told by Callis Shipley concerning his remark that Rylie would have stopped the wedding, had he been present. How to weigh his evidence remained a puzzle.

"The trouble," complained Kilday, "is too much evidence. Usually we're groping around in the dark for it. This time we've got too much."

At headquarters, there was one important bit of evidence. Examination of the revolver found in the rectory garden had revealed a thumb-print on the barrel.

"Good," grunted the sergeant. "Now look up these license numbers right away. I think perhaps the owners of these cars had something to do with it."

It did not take long. An assistant returned with the information in a very few minutes.

One car was registered under Webster Spears' name. The other belonged to Callis Shipley.

CHAPTER V

Choo Choo Train

With the exception of the mysterious woman in blue, whom they had been unable to identify, Cardigan and Kilday had questioned every one known to be connected with Jim Franklin's murder, except Choo Choo Train.

Her apartment was their destination the following morning.

The actress was having breakfast in bed and, upon learning their errand, had the maid usher them in without formality.

Before her, on the coverlet, was a confusion of newspapers. She brushed them to the floor, and leaned forward, her chin cupped in a slender hand. "I was reading about Jim," she said. "Tell me what happened."

Kilday sat uncomfortably on the edge of his chair. "I guess you know as much as I do, if you've read all those papers."

The actress shrugged impatiently. "If I believed them," her tone was contemptuous, "I'd believe he was murdered by a dozen people, including myself. I see I'm supposed to be the woman in the case."

"You've been reading Topics," declared Kilday.

"Half a million other people have, too," Choo Choo clenched the coverlet. "My press agent thinks it's a great stunt. He woke me up this morning, to gloat over the front-page publicity. He'd been reading Topics."

"And what do you think?" Peter inquired gravely.

The woman shrugged. "I guess I'm not supposed to think," she said slowly, with no attempt to disguise her bitterness. "Me, I'm just a show-girl. A dead lover isn't supposed to mean a thing in the world to me but front-page publicity and more customers at the box office."

"I'm just the woman in the case," she repeated, with an ache in her voice.

Both men were silent. Kilday, sitting very erect, was looking out the window, plainly reluctant to gaze upon the woman's pain. Peter was uncomfortably aware that he had not expected anything like this. The Choo Choo Train he had pictured as Jim Franklin's mistress—the woman who had quarreled with her lover in Doctor Abernathy's study—had been very different in his imagination.

The clink of china, as the maid brought additional cups and another pot of coffee, was a welcome interruption. Peter, who had already breakfasted, accepted the cup gratefully.

"Good girl, Marie," their hostess praised the maid. "You made that entrance just in time. I was about to emote." She held out her cup for more coffee with a hand that did not tremble.

"And now," she continued, after the maid had left, "let's have it. What did you want to see me about, Sergeant Kilday?"

It was Peter who took up the questioning. "You went to the church to see Franklin yesterday," he said gravely. "Why? We need to know that, first."

Choo Choo shrugged. "I wanted to see the wedding," she replied simply. "If you were a woman, you might understand. I'd never been to a wedding like that. And then, you see, Jim Franklin was my man. That made a big difference, too."

"Oh, of course," she hurried on to say, "I could have stood out in front with the crowd. But I wanted to see the whole thing—wanted a grandstand seat. After all, that wasn't such a lot to ask."

"I see," Peter thought he did see. "And Franklin didn't want you to be there. Was that it?"

The woman nodded her head.

"Then how did you happen to go? You must have discussed this with Franklin, before the wedding, didn't you?"

"Yes, we had talked about it, of course. As a matter of fact, we had a couple of pretty stormy scenes over it. Jim couldn't understand why I should want to go, unless it was just to humiliate him. There were a lot of things he couldn't understand about me, I guess."

"But just the same you went, yesterday."

"Yes, I went. But he asked me to, or at least, I thought he did. Yesterday afternoon, Fletcher—that's Jim's man-servant—phoned to say that Jim had changed his mind, and I went."

"But when you arrived," Peter continued, remembering the story that Nick Royce had told, "Franklin was angry. Evidently he was not expecting you. Is that correct?"

The actress nodded reluctantly. "I went to the side entrance, just like Fletcher told me to. Jim was standing just inside. Nick Royce was there, too."

"What are you doing here, Choo Choo?" Jim said. "I thought I told you to stay away from here."

"Yes, but I got your message," I told him.

"What message?" Jim demanded. It was easy to see how angry he was.

"And then of course I told him about Fletcher's telephone message, and he was angrier than ever. He told me I was lying. After that, I lost my temper, too, I guess. We were talking pretty loud, both of us, because Nick stopped us. He said he was afraid they could hear us inside the church. 'What do you want to do, stop the wedding?' Nick said."

"That's exactly what she'd like to do," Jim said. But he knew better than that. I wasn't trying to stop the wedding."

"But after that you went into the study, didn't you?" Peter made no attempt to disguise his interest.

"We went into the room behind the one we were in," replied the actress guardedly. "I'm not sure whether it was the study or not."

"What happened then?"

"Nothing. Jim swore that he hadn't told Fletcher to telephone me. He said somebody was just trying to play him a dirty trick. By that time, I guess I had cooled off a little, too, because I finally promised to come on home, and I left. That's the last I saw of Jim."

"How did you leave? The way you came?"

"No, I went out a door at the back."

"Why?" This time it was Kilday who asked.

"Because Jim asked me to. He was afraid I might be seen if I left by way of the side door."

The detective pulled the key-ring from his pocket, bouncing it in his palm, where the actress might see it.

"These were Franklin's," he said. "Does one of them fit this apartment?"

Lesson for February 18

JESUS' POWER TO HELP

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 8:1-9:34.
GOLDEN TEXT—But go ye and learn what that meaneth, I will have mercy, and not sacrifice: for I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance. Matthew 9:13.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Forgives a Sinful Man.
JUNIOR TOPIC—How Jesus Proves He Can Forgive Sin.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Jesus Meets Our Needs.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus Meeting Human Needs.

In chapters 8 and 9 of Matthew are grouped a number of miracles which exhibit the power of Jesus Christ over the chief foes of men—sickness, sin, satanic power, death, and storms. It is fitting that they should be grouped here following the laws of the kingdom, for they show the king's power to administer the affairs of the kingdom and produce within his subjects the graces of character demanded by these laws. It would make the lesson too long to attempt to consider all these miracles. Therefore certain of the most outstanding should be selected.

1. Jesus Heals a Leper (8:1-4).
1. The dreadful disease (v. 2). Leprosy was the most loathsome and hopeless disease known. In the Jewish ritual it was regarded as a symbol of sin. Just as leprosy was incurable by man, so only the Divine Physician can cure sin.

2. The leper's faith (v. 2). His cry was most pitiable, but his faith was strong. He fully believed that Jesus was able, but was uncertain as to his willingness, to heal him.

3. Jesus' power (v. 3). He put forth his hand and touched the leper, bidding the disease to depart, and instantly the man was cleansed.

11. Jesus Heals the Centurion's Servant (8:5-13).
1. The disease (v. 6). It was paralysis. In paralysis the victim is helpless.

2. The centurion's humility (v. 8). He first sent the Jewish elders and then his friends (Luke 7:3, 6) because he felt his own unworthiness. The condition of this servant was so grave that his master brushed aside timidity and personally appealed to Jesus.

3. The centurion's faith (vv. 8, 9). He believed that if Jesus would but speak the word his servant would be healed. His faith was so remarkable that Jesus marveled because it was not like anything he had discerned among the chosen people.

4. The wonderful power of Jesus (v. 13). He did not even need to see the helpless man and touch him, but needed only to speak the word and it was done.

111. Jesus Heals Peter's Mother-in-Law (8:14, 15).
This woman was sick of a fever. Jesus was invited into Peter's home to heal her, and upon his touching the hand of the patient the fever left her.

IV. Jesus Casts Out Demons (8:28-34).
After stilling the tempest, Jesus crossed to the other side of the sea into heathen territory.

1. Met by two men possessed by demons (v. 28). These men were in a desperate condition (Mark 5:1-17, and Luke 8:27). So fierce were they that no one could safely pass that way. Many today are demon possessed and their number is increasing (1 Tim. 4:1).

2. What they knew about Christ (v. 29). They knew that he was the Son of God and that he had come to destroy the devil and his work. Among demons there is no doubt as to the deity of Jesus Christ and the judgment to come.

3. Limitation of the devil's power (v. 31). Although the devil is mighty in power, he cannot even enter a hog without God's permission.

4. Christ's power to deliver from the devil (vv. 30-32).
The demons quailed before him, not daring to dispute his power, but begged permission to enter the swine.

V. Jesus Opening the Eyes of Two Blind Men (9:27-31).
1. The intelligence of faith (v. 27). They cried unto him as the Son of David which showed they recognized him as the promised Messiah. The prophet had foretold such to be the works of the Messiah (Isa. 29:18, 35:5, 41:7).

2. The persistence of faith (v. 28). These poor men had heard of the wonderful works of Jesus. This wrought in them a desire to be healed. They, therefore, followed him along the way crying out for help.

3. The challenge of faith (v. 28). In reply to his challenge they gave him a definite answer.

4. The triumph of faith (vv. 29, 30). Their faith brought them into touch with the Lord of life, who opened their eyes.

Our Giving Measure

God's great purpose in wanting men to give to him is that he may be enabled to give more abundantly to them. It is impossible for a man to give anything to God that does not come back to the man a thousandfold.

Tact

The observance of tact, the universally lauded, depends chiefly on the omission of certain actions, or even more often of words. To say the right thing at the right time to the right person is perfection.

"PUSHING" A RUMOR

A spy story—told by David Lloyd George in the second volume of his "War Memoirs":

"A Zeppelin hunted up and down the (river) Trent all through a January night in 1916, trying to locate and bomb the (munition) factory at Chilwell, near Nottingham, but without success. A rumor spread next day in true war-time fashion that Lord Chetwynd (head of the factory) had caught three German spies trying to signal the Zeppelin with lights, and had shot them out of hand.

"He was prompt to turn it to account, so he set a policeman as sentry all day over an empty room, and at night made a laborer dig three graves on the hillside. Into these he put stones and filled them in, with a black post at the head of each. That turned the rumor into unquestioned history, and discouraged would-be spies and the unwanted curious from prying round the place."—Kansas City Times.

Here's Quickest, Simplest Way to Stop a Cold

1. Take 2 Bayer Aspirin Tablets.
2. Drink full glass of water. Repeat treatment in 2 hours.
3. If throat is sore, crush and dissolve 3 Bayer Aspirin Tablets in a half glass of water and gargle according to directions in box.

Almost Instant Relief

The simple method pictured above is the way doctors throughout the world now treat colds.

It is recognized as the QUICK-EST, safest, surest way to treat a cold. For it will check an ordinary cold almost as fast as you caught it.

DOES NOT HARM THE HEART

Ask your doctor about this. And when you buy, see that you get the real BAYER Aspirin Tablets. They dissolve almost instantly. And thus work almost instantly when you take them. And for a gargle, Genuine BAYER Aspirin Tablets dissolve so completely they leave no irritating particles. Get a box of 12 tablets or a bottle of 24 or 100 at any drug store.

TOO TIDY

Some women demand that all magazines and papers be carefully kept in the receptacle provided. This should be a breakable rule. People like to have papers to hand, but naturally forget to replace them, and a few magazines here and there give a "lived-in" look to a room.

Read the "Ads" but don't ignore medical opinion

if you want to

- relieve constipation gently and safely
- take the exact dose suited to your need
- avoid danger of bowel strain

A doctor will tell you that the careless use of harsh laxatives will often do more harm than good.

Harsh laxatives often drain the system, weaken the bowel muscles, and even affect the liver and kidneys.

Fortunately, the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form.

Can Constipation be safely relieved?

"Yes!" say medical men. "Yes!" say thousands who have followed this sensible medical advice: 1. Select a good liquid laxative. 2. Take the dose that you find suited to your system. 3. Gradually reduce the dose until bowels are moving regularly without assistance.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a prescriptional preparation containing senna, a natural vegetable laxative which relieves constipation gently and safely. Why not try it? Some pill or tablet may be more convenient to carry. But there is no "convenience" in any cathartic that's taken so frequently, you must carry it wherever you go!

What is the "Right" Laxative?

In buying any laxative, read the label. Not the claims, but the contents. If it contains doubtful

Why Doctors give a liquid laxative

The habitual use of harsh salts, or powerful drugs in the highly concentrated form of pills or tablets is risky.

The properly prepared liquid laxative will bring a perfect movement without discomfort or injury. You need not take a "double dose" a day or two later.

The public can always get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at any drug store.

One of the most important phases of our nationwide child welfare activities is the V. F. W. National Home at Eaton Rapids, Michigan, which is a unique project fulfilling, we believe, a need for which there is no other provision.

Since the Armistice of November, 1918, there has been little or no effort on the part of the United States government itself to provide for the care and welfare of the widows and orphans of our World War honored dead. Realizing the debt the citizens of this country owe to the women and children whose homes were broken and lives saddened by the loss of their husbands and fathers, the members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States have gladly assumed a stewardship over these families of their former comrades.

The V. F. W. National Home was founded in 1925 on a tract of approximately 600 acres of rolling Michigan farm land near the town of Eaton Rapids. There, in a beautiful natural setting, a "city of children" has been developed. At the present time, approximately 125 orphaned children of deceased veterans are being cared for under the V. F. W. child welfare program. The word "Home" is particularly appropriate for this V. F. W. project. It is a "home" in the sense that your own household is a home. There is no suggestion, whatever, of an "institutional" atmosphere. A score of houses, each individually designed and built, are occupied by family groups of from five or six to never more than ten or eleven boys and girls all under the watchful care of a "house mother". There isn't a sign of a uniform in the place. Sally Lou's frocks and Tom my's shirts and ties are individually selected. Each child's preferences and special needs in the way of food, recreation, exercise and other matters, are individually considered. Frequently, a real brother and sister are members of the same Home "family" for every effort is made to preserve natural family ties. The "house mothers" are carefully chosen, not only for their ability and experience, but for their motherly and affectionate qualities.

In short, every detail of each unit of the National Home carefully and authentically reproduces the atmosphere and background of the average American household.

The V. F. W. National Home is the special pride and responsibility of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States. Every penny of the cost of its establishment was contributed through the activities of the individual members and unit groups of our organization. Various V. F. W. state departments have purchased a number of the houses and additional units are being planned by other state groups. The Ladies' Auxiliary recently purchased and equipped a beautiful $35,000 hospital unit, where the finest of up-to-date medical treatment is afforded the children of the Home. The best educational facilities available are afforded the children of school age, school buses conveying them to and from the grade and high schools of Eaton Rapids each school day. Until they reach the age of maturity, these sons and daughters of men who gave their lives or sacrificed their health and their independence in defense of the United States of America are assured a home and protection. In addition, they are being trained for independence and self-support by the time they reach maturity.

To date, this undertaking has enjoyed steady and gratifying development. The work has been carried on since 1925, quietly and without ostentation or ballyhoo. There has been no attempt to commercialize on the memory of our honored soldier dead beyond our desire to acquaint the general public with the manner in which a portion of the funds it contributes thru the purchase of Buddy Poppies each year goes toward the maintenance of this project. One penny from each Buddy Poppy sold annually is diverted to the V. F. W. National Home for its support and continued development. Through the activities of our National Americanization Department, and its sale of historical volumes, another source of income for the National Home has been created. All other funds necessary for its maintenance have come from within the organization itself in the form of life memberships and contributions.

The V. F. W. National Home at Eaton Rapids, Michigan, has become a major objective in a relief program being sponsored by the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States. It will always continue as such in accord with the V. F. W. principle that seeks to honor the dead by helping the living.

The various townships and villages of Will County are being paid out tax money due them in a final settlement by county treasurer Herbert R. Jones. Collections on the 1932 county tax levy in the various townships fell short of the per cent of collection in 1931 taxes. Many of the tax groups had little coming as they had drawn heavily upon their share during the year.

STOP GAS PAINS! GERMAN REMEDY GIVES RELIEF

CWA FULL OF GRAFT; LET ARMY RUN CWA

There is graft in the administration of the CWA. From Pennsylvania to California by way of Kentucky or by way of Illinois and Iowa the trail of complaint may be followed. And every newspaper big or little honestly critical of the national administration is whooping up this graft with cries which, if not exactly gleeful, are certainly not reluctant. The administration acts with a sour conviction that the cries are justified. No satisfactory rejoinder is possible. There IS GRAFT in giving CWA jobs.

Yes, there is one thing to be said. We are in an economic war. Politicians who are handling the CWA jobs are like sergeants in the army of which Roosevelt is just now the general. In using the CWA for graft, they are not only deserters, but they are deserters in the face of the enemy. They are not only traitors but they are cowardly traitors; they are not only dishonest but they are dastards.

When the CWA was started under the direction of President Roosevelt the relief commission was made the CWA board for Illinois with full power to control all CWA contracts and employment. Complaints were quick and emphatic. Investigation by experts from Washington revealed conditions which caused the president to put an army officer in a position to see what was going on. The entire relief commission then resigned from all CWA authority, beating the president to it, perhaps. The CWA should be handled entirely by the United States Army so that no politician could have a word to say.

It seems that the minute any public money is being spent, men who are in charge of the spending turn to be crooks and thieves. Money is a great evil when men will sell and even damn their souls to get possession of it by fair means or foul.

WEIRD STORIES TOLD ABOUT OLD MANSION

Reports of strange occurrences in the one time lavish but now crumbling and deserted mansion of the late Harlow Higinbotham, situated on a 2,000 acre estate four miles east of Joliet on the Lincoln Highway.

Higinbotham was killed by an automobile in New York City in 1908. He was president of the 1893 Chicago World's Fair, and for nearly 40 years was an official of the Marshall Field Company.

The mansion took a year to construct at a cost of about $200,000, and was completed in 1893. It contains about thirty-five rooms, and is augmented by extensive greenhouses, stables and other buildings. Priceless pieces of art were included among its furnishings. Underground passages lead from the mansion to the greenhouses and stables. Daniel Burnham, architect for the 1893 World's Fair, supervised construction.

After the mansion was completed, Mrs. Higinbotham after residing there for about seven months, suddenly decided she would no longer live there, and the family moved to Chicago. She never gave any reason for the action, but is said to have stated at the time "This is the happiest day of my life, now that I'm getting away from that house."

It was disclosed that numerous additional reports have been made to authorities of weird happenings in and around the deserted old mansion. On the basis of these reports, a search was made.

A dead dog, a dead cat and two dead birds were found. No one goes near the structure, though Harlow D. Higinbotham, Jr., resides on the estate in a home about a half mile west of the mansion. To the east on the adjoining estate, State Senator Richard J. Barr resides with his family. His son Billy, 14, reported: "One night recently I was suddenly awakened by what I thought to be a scream. I listened for a while and then went to a window. I looked across and could see a light in the yard at the house. It looked like someone was carrying a torch. Then it disappeared."

Senator Barr himself said: "I'm not a believer in ghosts or such things, but from what I've heard I'd never want to do any prowling around that abandoned home at night."

Several days ago a couple parking on a side road near the mansion heard weird noises. They drove hastily to police headquarters in Joliet and reported it. Another woman recently reported seeing lights in different windows of the house at night.

Children of the Barr family for several years have related at the breakfast table the strange sounds and sights they have heard or seen. Sheriff Oliver Flint has numerous reports of the mansion being "haunted." He said:

"There's nothing I can do about it, even if it is haunted. There's a sign warning people to stay out. If they want to go in and see ghosts, that's their funeral."

Mr. Higinbotham never has made any attempt to sell or salvage the mansion. Family members refuse to discuss it and never visit the place. Two of the late Mr. Higinbotham's daughters are also living. Mrs. R. C. Crane, wife of the plumbing fixture manufacturer, and Mrs. Patterson, wife of a New York newspaper publisher.

AFRAID TO LIVE! Claudius E. Wade, Director Chicago College of Commerce

How things do change! A few years ago we heard about men being afraid to die, but a cursory reading of the current philosophical literature might easily create the impression that men are now becoming afraid to live.

The problems that humanity now confronts—social, economic, political, and religious, then the vast injustices that must be righted—have so terrified some minds until their only hope is to be allowed to disappear and forever be unconscious of what is going on.

A prominent lawyer, when asked on Thanksgiving Day what he was thankful for, replied that he was thankful that he was almost thru and would shortly enter that sleep from which he would never awake. A scholarly professor held that "complete annihilation," the chemical change called Death, is a sufficient reward for those who are good and heroically unselfish.

What kind of cowardice is this shrinking from life? Who wants to be a scientist if science makes one afraid of the universe in which we live? Who wants to be a philosopher if philosophy gives him nothing but a passing show, from which one would be grateful to be released into nothing?

A questionnaire was sent to a large group of ministers, and when returned revealed that 54 per cent did not believe there is a devil. In the wake of this information comes the startling statement that in the United States last year, 22,000 men and women in various walks of life were afraid to live and committed suicide.

More than half of the college freshmen which I contact tell me that they have contemplated suicide. In these days of overwhelming revelations and social anxieties, it is vitally necessary that the human spirit be renewed. Certainly this renewal must come from some other source than the fears and doubts of those who quake and quiver when confronted by the problems of life as they are today.

Mother Nature Never Failure as Physician

Nature is a great rest-giver. And nature is a great physician. In the city we become excitable and hot. We move at a headlong pace. The interruptions and collisions are many. We need a physician who can take the fever from the brow and the fret out of the heart. Nature has remedies for all who are sick.

The pessimism and cynicism of great cities are the result of continuous contact with human tragedies and miseries. Something is always going wrong; vice is always flaunting itself in one's face; crime is always being committed, some one is always suffering; some one is always dying. It is difficult to keep serene and sane in such a bedlam of a world. We need nature. She is sensible and strong. She has no vagaries, no hallucinations, no delusions. She indulges in no fads. She wastes no time in speculations or guesses. She keeps for ever an even pulse. We need her. To think of her calm face is refreshment and power.—Dr. C. C. Jefferson.

DOCTOR'S ANSWERS To Questions

By S. C. Babcock, M. D.
Q. I am in a random condition due to a frequent bad cough and stomach trouble. What can I do to help this condition?
Ans.—This is not an unusual condition. You can help yourself by a diet which should include plenty of milk, fruits and vegetables. A good medicine like Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which any good drug store can supply, has my greatest confidence.

Face Full of Pimples Could Not Go Anywhere

Healed by Cuticura

"My face was full of hard, red pimples. My skin was very sore and red and I could not go anywhere without everybody looking at me. The pimples were very itchy and I scratched them until they bled. I lost my night's sleep so many times I was disgusted.

"I tried different things, but without success. I happened to see an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. I bought more and after I had used three cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment my face was completely healed." (Signed) Miss Anna Krouchick, 450 Emmett St., Scranton, Pa.

BEAUTY TALKS

MARJORIE DUNCAN

MASQUES AGAIN POPULAR

A FAMOUS French beautician, recently arrived in this country, tells me that masques are regaining popularity.

So I went to her hotel to learn what was new in masques. I was very much surprised to see a little bit of a box with small packages in it. "All ready, see," she said, "just to add an egg and use a white stocking, if we wish."

It was all very interesting. The white stocking, she explained later, was optional, but she always liked using one, cutting out holes for the eyes and nostrils and then slip-stitching them very quickly so that they would not stretch out of place very much. This secures the masque if complete relaxation is desired or a nap possible. The latter she endorses very heartily.

For the new wrinkles that come with frowning, scowling or fatigue, a masque is splendid to whisk them away. For that yellow, muddy look that follows temporary indisposition, fatigue or exposure, a masque is just the thing. For sluggish skin, it draws the circulation to the surface. It wards off perspiration, removes scarf-skin. A pink, healthy, glowing color should take the place of that heavy leaden look. For relaxed skin or muscles it is astringent but not too drying.

And here is the thing that intrigued me. The French woman of our story owns several salons in Europe, the Orient and this country. An experienced operator applies the masque, while the client lies back and relaxes luxuriously. "That is fine for those who have the money," as one of my readers wrote me recently. But as the creator of the mask said: "This, what you call depression, it is in our country as well as yours and we too serve ourselves and save."

The masque works in very nicely after our cleansing step, and the rest of the treatment remains quite the same.

If you are troubled with broken veins you should not apply excessive heat or cold to these areas. Use the most soothing of creams and do not use strong astringents to such spots. The care of the skin is a simple thing if you use intelligence and the best of cosmetics. Don't buy things only because they are cheap or only because they are expensive. Find out whether or not they are good for you.

BE YOURSELF!

WHEN Peggy was five years old, she promised to be an individual. She had definite ideas as to the colors she liked best, the way she wished her hair cut, the length of her socks and so on. What Sister Jane or Cousin Helen chose didn't matter. "Why must I do what they do, or wear what they wear?" she would say.

As she grew older, more and more people would say: "There's a person, interesting, individual." Very suddenly something happened. Some one made the mistake of telling Peggy that she looked very much like one of the prominent screen stars. And Peggy was sixteen then, and self-conscious. She started an intensive campaign of imitation. As the screen star was reported to wear her hair, Peggy wore it.

From another source Peggy learned that her luminary liked extreme gowns, which was all very well for the screen star, but quite otherwise for young Peggy. The subject of our sermon spent more time studying her idol than she devoted to her school. The soap the screen star used, the lipstick she chose, the powder she preferred, the style of her gowns, the arrangement of her hair; all these Peggy not only knew, but imitated.

Study your own possibilities, not your neighbor's or your screen star's. It is fine to imitate a shining example of loveliness, but be sure that type and circumstances are sufficiently similar and that a full measure of success may be expected.

What if platinum blond or reddish auburn is the trend; your raven locks are an outstanding feature with you. Play up the color. Be different. Be yourself. Standardization is beauty's destruction. If you are one of the few individuals who look strikingly smart with straight hair, refuse to curl. One can look smart without looking old-fashioned; one can be individual without being eccentric. Study your own skin, your own figure, your own coloring and let your own needs decide what preparations, what exercises, what make-up you should use. Emerge a successful and beautiful "original" instead of a poor, ludicrous "carbon copy."

Don't rub your powder on—it causes enlarged pores and grinds small particles into your skin. Nobody should be afraid of soap on the face—does anybody take a bath without soap? Even dry faces need it.

The skin is an important factor in feminine charm. This must definitely be on the asset side for a woman to really look her loveliest. A dry skin can be nourished to smooth beauty, oiliness corrected, sagging muscles firmed, blackheads and eruptions cleared away, enlarged pores refined and a dull, heavy skin stimulated to new life and vitality.

Washington at Valley Forge

HERE is no finer example in American history of faith and pluck than that which was made at Valley Forge by the Continental army under its commander in chief, George Washington, in the winter of 1777-1778.

It is doubtful whether the sacrifice of the Continental army has ever been adequately realized, Arthur Weller writes in the National Republic Magazine. Half-starved, ill-clad, poorly sheltered, and in great peril, not only from the pangs of hunger and cold, but also from enemy attacks, they huddled about their campfires while the British under Lord Howe, at the "rebel" capital of Philadelphia, celebrated the taking of it with dances and other gala events.

Tracked March of Troops by Bloodstains of Feet on Ground.

In Marshall's Washington we find this: "At no period of the war had the American army been reduced to a situation of greater peril than during the winter at Valley Forge. More than once they were absolutely without food." What hardships were undergone can be deduced from the fact that only 5,000 out of the 17,000 who encamped there in December for that winter were fit for active duty. Clothing, no less than food, was scarce. Men wore each other's uniforms in order that the naked could be clad and take their turn at active duties.

One account tells of Washington, one cold morning, meeting his sentinel as the commander left headquarters, the Potts house. The sentinel was making vigorous movements with his hands and legs in order to keep warm. Noting this, Washington asked him if he had had his breakfast. Upon receiving a negative reply, Washington hurried the sentinel inside the house, and while he was being served a breakfast by Mrs. Washington, George Washington, with the sentinel's gun, stood guard outside his own house until the soldier's return.

Illustrative also of the conditions in the camp at beautiful, yet tragic, Valley Forge, so close to Philadelphia, so near the British, is the account of Washington's visit to a detachment of his own men. He had been keeping his eyes on the ground, apparently noting something interesting there on the snowy slopes. Upon drawing near to the chief officer of the detachment, Washington quietly returned the salute, then abruptly asked:

"How comes it, sir, that I have tracked the march of your troops by the bloodstains of their feet upon the frozen ground? Were there no shoes in the commissary's stores?"

To this the officer replied that his detachment was one of the last to receive shoes, also that the supply shortly after his detachment was reached had been exhausted.

Washington listened in silence, but his deep sighs showed with what emotion he heard this report. Turning to his men he said, his voice trembling, "Poor fellows!" Then he gave rein to his charger and rode rapidly away.

GEORGE WASHINGTON WAS A DOCTOR

NOT well known, but authentic, is the fact that George Washington was really a physician. His knowledge of medicine prepared him to treat the illnesses of slaves on his own plantation. During his final illness, before other doctors were called in, he directed his own treatment, says a writer in Hygeia, the Health Magazine. As was customary at the time, he ordered himself bled. Shortly before he died, his breathing became easier and he withdrew his hand from a friend's and felt his own pulse. Washington thus evidently realized that the end had come and gave up hope; for immediately a great change came over his countenance and his hand fell lifeless to his side.

Valley Forge is more than a beautiful state park today. It is symbolic of something more than forced privations. It is a shrine that instills in all true Americans a deeper appreciation of the manhood and the sacrifice of those who were quartered there during the darkest hour of the Revolution. It is symbolic of a never-dying devotion to a cause and to a great commander that kept hope alive.

♦ ♦ Tomb of ♦ ♦ WASHINGTON

THE tomb of George Washington at beautiful Mount Vernon is a national shrine. It is more, even, than that. It is a shrine of the whole world. Ships from every country in the world, when they sail up the Potomac past the tomb, dip their flags and toll their bells solemnly. And many of the biggest men on earth, kings, princes, Presidents, warriors, statesmen, make pilgrimages to this shrine of all humanity and lay so many wreaths at the tomb of Washington that often the barred iron doors of it are hidden under them.

Inaugural Ride Precedent

Originated by Washington
IT WAS George Washington himself who set the courteous precedent whereby the retiring President rides with the incoming one to his inauguration, says a writer in the Saturday Evening Post.

Since 1797 this precedent has been broken only by the Adamases, both great, but cantankerous.

"The President of the United States comes in through the iron gates and goes out by the weeping willows," said Dolly Madison.

Since the fair Dolly's time, the side entrance by the willow trees has been closed. But only the route is altered. The sentiment remains.

Social Code of First Importance

Consider Hostess When New Friends Are Made, Is Imperative.

The approach to friendships is one of the things which determines our pleasure in it. Sometimes a chance happening throws people together through some incident, or possibly club affiliations through similarity of interests is the reason for meeting. What pace a friendship shall take, that is how rapidly it shall move from the attitude of acquaintances to that of intimate friends, the two persons can govern. But there is a third way of making friends that has an entirely different set of rules. When two persons meet at the home of a mutual friend, good taste dictates that they shall be followed.

An unwritten law exists in the social code which is not less important because many persons disobey it. They are criticized, and rightly, when they do. The host or hostess, under whose roof the new acquaintances meet, should be included in the first invitation given the new friend. If that host or hostess cannot be reached when an invitation is telephoned, a letter should go saying that the effort was made to reach him or her, and why. To let this information be picked up through outside sources is to break at least one link of friendship with the hostess.

There is no reason why those who meet at a social occasion in a friend's home should, on that account, take pains to avoid each other. But the first courtesy is owed to the hostess, in fact, one might almost say, the first allegiance. When a subsequent party is arranged which deliberately precludes the first friend, especially if the one invited is a man, it can hardly be overlooked. To some it would seem that this circumstance is inconceivable. In the experience of the writer it has been met occasionally and offense given.

No course but to remain dignified is permitted the first hostess, if she is to appear at her best. Whatever her viewpoint on the matter, that is her own affair. An increase of formality, and decline of intimacy is a tactful way of indicating that one's ethics have been applied to the situation. Of course, if the expected courtesies are extended to the hostess at the outset, she will not attempt to keep her former guests from being as close friends as they may wish to be.

Figures Do Not Lie

Reid had learned to count in the age-old fashion of counting his fingers. One day he was counting them again and again and finally shook his head in bewilderment, holding up his hands for his mother to solve the difficulty.

"Well, look, as far as I can see my hands look just the same but this one has only five fingers," he said, holding up the first hand he had counted, and then thrusting up the second one, "but this one has ten!"
